

Cultural Competency

The Agency for Health Care Administration (AHCA) supports ongoing training for cultural competency in the delivery of services for all its health plans and providers. Georgetown University's National Center for Cultural Competence offers a variety of valuable resources to organizations and practitioners to improve their cultural competency skills and develop and implement a cultural competency plan.

To help you with your continued efforts to care more effectively for patients from various ethnic and minority groups please click on the link below to the Georgetown University's National Center for Cultural Competence to view their resources.
